The audible beep, which can be turned off if desired, is very useful when shooting in quick succession to let you know when it is ready to take the next shot. The controls are logically laid out and easy to use. It works perfect with the cowboy studio wireless hot shoe transmitters I got from Amazon. I am mainly using it for portraits with 12 people and children and it is great. I was concerned at first that the 200 watts would not be enough power but I have not had to push it over half power yet. I highly recommend this strobe for those out there putting together a quality but inexpensive home studio.They would not be so bad except that they cannot support a small softbox, which is a pretty serious shortcoming. When you attach a light mod, and set the head at a particular angle, the head will slump over in about 5 minutes. These lights are only good for umbrella use, or if you need a spare kicker or hair light to supplement your set of actual grownup lights. The one good thing about these lights is their ability to slave, another is that they have a modeling light. I brought my heads back to Calumet in Chicago thinking I got some kind of defected set. The salesperson explained these lights are for beginners. Apparently beginners shouldnt know what softboxes are. Ill give him this much, he took pity on me and had his repair people fix the stripped bolts that resulted from trying to tighten these things again and again so theyd hold up just a small softie. Save your money for a while longer until you can afford to buy Speedotron, Profoto, et al. As far as I can tell, those work for beginners as well as pros.Seemed like a good deal, so I ordered directly from the store. The boxes they had all looked like returned items so I asked if he could order me unopened ones. He said sure. So I gave them my CC and ordered them. Next week I went to the store and they got them in. The boxes were all taped like they were already

The sales person said they come like that from the warehouse. So I took them home. I opened one up by pulling off the first tape instead of cutting the tape, the box had already been cut open. I was not happy. Inside the light head was clearly used, but the reflector looked sealed and new. I told the salesperson I wanted unopened ones and he ordered them for me specifically. I called Calumet and they said they would order two more. I said again, unopened, the salesperson said of course. The lights came in, so back to the store and returned the open ones. They brought out the new lights and they were clearly opened. They made more excuses about how that is the way they come. I asked if they could order me some unopened, so I left the new and old ones at the store and they would call me. I talked with the salesperson on the phone and he said again the boxes come all taped up, but now he says it is because the power cable that was put in the box during manufacture was a UK cable and they had to put in a US cable. I asked, why would the head look used. He did not call and I went in and spoke with the manager and he told me the same thing. I found two boxes and took them. Got them back and tested them. Both had defects. They really wasted a lot of my time and they just do not care. I will be returning them. It is illegal to sell returned or refurbished items as new in California per civil code 1770.6. As for defects, one unit did not fire unless the photocell was set to 2 and then only at full power. That unit was also smoking a little. The other unit the reflector was loose and the lock ring did not lock it. The model lamp set to full power setting only worked on low. I've replaced the mounts on BOTH of my lights. Total garbage. It cant support a basic beauty dish, and just flops down. Making a move over to alien bees. Their mounts look a lot more solid and trustworthy. I tried to turn on the modeling lamp, and the fuse blew.

The Genesis optical triggers are said to be calumet genesis 200 manual adjustable to ignore preflash from TTL flashes, and perhaps they do if that is what you must do, but Commander is a whole different deal, many times more flashing occurs. It powered on, and the rear display and fan came on.
